Hosts

Ambassador Pete Romero

Pete, a 25-year career US diplomat, served as head of our embassy in El Salvador, US Ambassador in Ecuador, and Assistant Secretary of State for the Western Hemisphere Bureau at the US Department of State.

Laura Bennett

Laura has written, directed, and produced films that have won 11 awards and screened at 35 festivals throughout the US. She is a professor at Georgetown University and a communications strategy consultant on non-profit and government projects.

OUR MISSION

At American Diplomat, we go behind the scenes to hear real stories from diplomats who lived newsworthy events overseas. Experience the Cuban revolution, Central American insurgencies, the end of apartheid, and more through the eyes of those who were there. Our guests include some of our country's foremost leaders: Bill Burns, Director of CIA; Linda Thomas-Greenfield, US Ambassador to the UN; and Deputy Secretaries of State Wendy Sherman and Richard Verma. We take pride in inspiring a generation of young diplomats and international public servants. Our mission is to help our listeners understand who diplomats are – regular people called upon to prevent war and genocide, save people from bombings, call out dictators, and free political prisoners.
